Holy Name Society Meets

New York City—While 5,000 delegates to the national convention of the Holy Name Society (2,500,000 members) knelt in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Patrick Cardinal Hayes followed a letter from Pope Pius XI with the comment: "The word 'patriotism' seems to be an obsolete word just now in our own country Rarely do we see it Rarely do we hear it. We are informed that even in our schools and colleges and universities, instead of patriotism we hear communism."

SET CLOCKS BACK HOUR NEXT SATURDAY NIGHT

The change back to standard time will take place at 2 a. m., Sunday, Sept. 27. The simplest way to gain the hour lost last April, and probably the common practice is to set the clock back an hour Saturday night. Some people still doubt if the hour has really been saved anyway.

HANNO A. PACKARD

Hanno A Packard died at his home Friday evening after having been for some time in failing health. Mr. Packard was born in Paris, Oct. 23, 1861, the son of Stephen G. and Louisa Penley Packard. He was the youngest son of a family of fifteen children, all of whom have passed away except one sister, Mrs. Abbie Burton, aged 71, of Corinna, Maine. He was educated in the schools of Paris and Monmouth.

Prior to coming to Bethel in 1888, he was engaged as a guard at the New York State Reformatory. Soon after coming to Bethel he married Miss Ella Bean of Bethel. Four children were born to them. Two died in infancy and two daughters, Methel and Ila are now living. Mrs Packard passed away in 1911.

HANNO A. PACKARD

Mr. Packard was employed for several years in the J. P. Skillings factory and in 1907 he bought out the undertaking business of Everett Staples and continued in this profession until 1912. He served the town as Constable for many years, also, as police for the Village Corporation. He also served as Game Warden and Coroner

When the World War broke out, Mr Packard went to Portland where he was employed as a shell inspector for the Portland Company In 1919 Mr. Packard married Mrs Ellen Tripp of Portland. Since then Mr. and Mrs. Packard were employed for several years as cooks. They returnd to Bethel in the fall of 1932 on account of Mr. Packard's ill health.

The greater part of Mr Packard's life was spent as an active citizen of Bethel. While his health prevented him from participating in the town's activities these past few years, he maintained to the last a keen interest in all town, state and national affairs as a very diligent reader of the newspapers and magazines.

Besides his wife, sister and daughters previously mentioned he leaves two step-children [illegible] M Tripp of Saco and Mrs Clarence Strout of West Poland and several nieces and nephews

WINTHROP GRIDSTERS PLAY GOULD, SAT.

Visitors Bring Many Veterans of Last Year's Team—Gould Pepped Up by Extra Week of Practice—Game Starts at 2:30 in Afternoon

Saturday at 2:30 the shrill cry of the whistle will open another season of football for local fans. The 1936 edition of Gould Academy gridsters will be presented to the public. The loss of many stars of last year's team has simply added more zest and enthusiasm to the few remaining veterans and a small squad of new men. Eager to prove their ability to recover from the blow of graduation, this year's team began a week's preliminary practice before the opening of the school. They have shown great improvement and hope to give the visitors a good battle.

Winthrop comes to Bethel with a great many veterans of last year and should prove a strong contender for honors here Saturday. They have the advantage of having played a game last Saturday so should be over that jittery first game feeling.

The outcome of Saturday's game would be quite difficult to predict but you can rest assured that the game is going to be a "nip and tuck" affair with plenty of excitement.

The game will start at 2:30 daylight time and W C. Coombs of Gorham, N. H., will be the referee. The opening lineup for Gould will probably find O. Robertson and Stiles at the ends with Robert Moore and Murray Thurston as tackles. The guards most likely to start are Edward Holt and Rodney Howe, while the center position will be held by Frank Littlehale

In the backfield at the half-back posts will be Parker Brown and Lawrence Perry Eddy Robertson at full-back and Erland Wentzell calling signals completes the eleven However, in the backfield two newcomers to the squad are showing up well, in the persons of Dick Young and Don Holt Both these men will see some service In the line Rodney Eames has been distinguishing himself as a defense man and should have an opportunity to get into action Saturday Harold Young, Sidney Howe, Clarence Poole and Rodney Wentzel are underclassmen who are showing promise also

MRS. A. E. BAILEY

Mrs Maud E., widow of A. E. Bailey of Newry, passed away Tuesday evening at the home of her daughter, Mrs H. W Boyker, after a month's illness. Funeral services are held at the Boyker residence this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

NEW LADDER TRUCK READY FOR BUSINESS

Corporation's New Outfit Fitted Out This Week — Upper Hose House Changed to Accommodate Truck and Town's New Pumper

The ladders and hose were placed in the remodelled fire truck of the Bethel Village Corporation Tuesday evening and the truck now replaces the old Hook and Ladder outfit which has been in use over 40 years.

The new equipment includes what was a Lincoln sedan. With part of the body utilized as a cab, the chassis was lengthened so as to give a 14 foot body to carry a thousand feet of hose, with racks above and over the cab for seven ladders Ten men or more can be carried in addition to the above equipment The work of reconstruction has been done by Ray Crockett and the completed truck is a credit to him and the Corporation

The town's new pumper is expected to arrive by rail on Saturday A similar apparatus for Kezar Falls is being shipped with it to be driven overland from here

The quarters of the Volunteer Hose Company and the Hook and Ladder Company have been renovated with new doors and a concrete entrance to provide ample quarters for the new outfits Additional floor supports have also been constructed on account of the greatly increased weights With the arrival of the new unit and after the firemen have become accustomed to the change in methods, Bethel will have a fire department equal to that of any community of like size

Employment Continues Gains

Living costs as of July 15th were 18% lower than 1929 .... The Treasury Department reported third-quarter income tax $40,243,662 over the same period receipts of $261,202,145, a gain of last year.

Farm Protection Sought

Washington, D. C.—Carrying out recommendations made by the Great Plains Drought Committee, the President has appointed two committees of Government experts to report to the incoming Congress on the necessity of crop insurance for farmers and the more efficient use of farm lands affected by the droughts of 1934 and this year. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace heads the Crop Insurance Committee and Morris L. Cooke, Rural Electrification Administrator, directs the Great Plains Permanent Land-Use Program.

New Maritime Body Formed

Washington, D. C.—Assuming the duties of the defunct Shipping Board and Merchant Fleet Corporation, the new Maritime Commission created by the last Congress began operations with the appointment of three of the five members authorized: Admiral William D. Standley, Chief of Naval Operations; James C. Peacock, formerly of the Shipping Board, and Harllee Branch, Second Assistant Postmaster General. The Commission has a fund of $25,500,000 to spend in subsidies and mail contracts and a construction-subsidy fund of $65,000,000.

France Loses Gold

Paris, France — Financiers are speculating on how long the Socialist Government can retain the franc on a gold parity. Since August $103,000,000 in gold has flown to the United States and gold holdings of the Bank of France have fallen to the lowest level since October, 1931.

Commerce Secretary Optimistic

Washington, D. C.—To a gathering of newspapermen, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper stated: "We are approaching one of the greatest eras of American history. We have not entered a temporary but a long-term upward swing." His optimism was based on the first returns from the new business census, showing retail sales gains ranging from 25% in Maine to 68% in Montana. In 1929-33 the losses in these two states were respectively 40 and 54%.

Hindenburg Breasts Storm

Lakehurst, N. J.—Riding out the hurricane that swept the North Atlantic, the German dirigible Hindenburg arrived here from Frankfort in 59 hours. She carried a passenger list of 72, the largest number thus far booked.

"Velocity Dollars" in Reverse

Calgary, Alberta — During the first month in which Premier Aberhart promised to redeem the "Velocity Dollar" launched in August, nearly all of the 175,000 bills in circulation bounced back into the Provincial Treasury. The Premier, father of the 25-a-month social credit scheme, blamed newspapers for public reluctance to accept the new dollar; suggested that editors be licensed like lawyers and doctors.

Electoral College Estimate

New York City—Neutral observers culling figures from a wide variety of sources including straw polls, newspaper ballots and confidential agencies, release this estimate on the Presidential electoral vote:

	Certain	Probable	Total
Roosevelt	225	75	[illegible]
Landon	49	182	231

Prevailing betting odds: 3 to [illegible] for Roosevelt.

Broadcasters Censor Politics

Washington, D. C. — Increasing vehemence in the Presidential campaign has brought knotty problems to the Federal Communications Commission. Two Los Angeles radio stations have refused time to President Roosevelt's "Fireside Chats" on the score that they are only campaign speeches, and explanations have been demanded of Indianapolis, Pittsburgh and Minneapolis stations for alleged discrimination against the Communist Party. To all inquiries, the big [illegible] network states: "We would not cut the President off....but we would donate an equal amount of time to the other parties."

POLITICAL OPINION . . .

DEMOCRATIC
National Committee

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN DOCTOR AND UNDERTAKER

The income of the Federal government is climbing because the country is registering recovery in unprecedented degree. The country is recovering because Roosevelt had the courage to spend when spending was necessary, knowing that such stimulation would bring the budget to balance.

Hoover went along for a tragic two years with successive three billion dollar deficits, deficits produced by declining revenues, not by recovery spending. Hoover borrowed to meet those panic deficits.

Roosevelt deliberately created deficits to deliberately spend for recovery. His deficits were planned deficits, part of a long-range program and he borrowed, as did Hoover, to meet them. Except he is paying a far lower interest rate.

So the difference is that Hoover borrowed to pay the undertaker. Roosevelt borrowed to pay the doctor.

A CHALLENGE TO REASON

"The leadership, as well as the platform, of the G. O. P. in 1936 is not only a bitter disappointment to those Republicans who are progressive, but a challenge to those whose first thought is for the nation's security and welfare. Like Senators Norris, of Nebraska, and Couzens of Michigan and many other consistent liberals, a great many Republicans not mentioned in the press have found in the New Deal a living program of those principles of freedom, justice and humanity to which the truly great Americans of all parties have been dedicated."—Atlanta Journal.

PATIENCE AND PROGRESS

"President Roosevelt has, as Senator Carter Glass recently remarked, an 'incomparable patience,' says The New York Times, and adds: "He will listen genially to persons who sometimes devastate his day. This is a part of his kindly attitude, a sign of his deep interest in political human nature of all kinds. Since it does not in the least embarrass him to allow people to cleanse their bosoms, it could hardly do so to learn that they are going to vote for his re-election. That is their affair. His affair is steadily to press forward the policies which he believes to be for the good of the country."

THE SPIRIT THAT COUNTS

The candidate of the party under which four years ago even the soberest men feared for the safety of democracy and capitalism as millions descended into despair, promises, now that the danger has been dispelled by Roosevelt, 'to prevent the abandonment of the American form of government' Governor Landon makes it clear that the aim of the Landon candidacy is to convince the people that the Roosevelt program should be administered in a Hoover spirit.—Raleigh News & Observer.

One enterprising Maine woman, dreading the job of washing spinach in ice-cold water, trundled out the family washing machine, scoured it out and washed spinach in record time

Sales of hatching eggs and chicks from pullorum-clean flocks in Maine during the season just closed were more than 50% above those of last year.

REPUBLICAN
National Committee

BALTIMORE SUN DROPS ROOSEVELT

BALTIMORE, MD.—The Baltimore Sun, for nearly 100 years one of the nation's leading Democratic newspapers, has announced that in this campaign it is "unable to advocate the re-election of President Roosevelt."

Its reasons were stated in an editorial, from which excerpts follow:

"This statement is made with regret. But we cannot close our eyes to what we conceive to have been fundamental errors in Mr. Roosevelt's policies.

"In April, 1933, Mr. Roosevelt began to turn away from the spirit, and to a large extent the letter, of his platform and from the spirit of his first acts as President. He inaugurated the New Deal and he based it upon vaguely formed and superficially considered ideas of planned economy. These ideas were directed toward nationalistic limitation of economic life and toward overriding Federal control of economic life within this nation.

"Does Governor Landon believe that the fundamental policy to which the Government should commit itself is a genuine competitive system, with such liberal adjustments in lower tariff policies, in debt policies, in credit policies, in currency stabilization policies, in law-enforcement policies and in labor policies as will promote the kind of competition that is healthy and real?

"In The Sun's opinion, there is reason to believe that he does. His brief confession of faith at his birthplace pointed in that direction."

Hayes Charges Roosevelt Broke Faith With Vets

FORT DODGE, IOWA.—No nation can long endure which fails to keep faith with its defenders, Edward A. Hayes, former national commander of the American Legion, warned in an address here. He charged the Roosevelt administration with saving money at the expense of disabled veterans and handing it over to "those economic royalists of Wall street in the form of tremendous interest payments on unnecessary government loans".

New Deal Tops War Spending

Washington. — Expenditures of four years under President Roosevelt's budgets, from the fiscal years 1934 to 1937, inclusive, will aggregate a total at least 27 per cent greater than the direct cost of the World War, it is estimated here.

American Way Best

"We have found by experience that American institutions serve our purpose better than those of any other country. We not only want to safeguard our freedom, but we also want security and abundance of the good things of life. We are told, however, by defeatists that we cannot have both. We must, they say, choose between freedom and security. They insist we must give up one in order to gain the other. Let us not surrender to any such counsel of despair."—Gov. Alf Landon at West Middlesex, Pa., August 22, 1936.

AN APPEAL

This is written to the students who are selecting their subjects for study this year to urge them to include botany in their courses.

It is to be regretted that so little interest in botany has been shown in preparatory schools during recent years. To those persons who have pursued its study the usefulness of this minor science is apparent.

Botany is the fundamental analysis of how plants grow under their [illegible] names, and it is a first step toward a knowledge of all green life upon the existence of which mankind is completely dependent. Without the growth and maintenance of leafy plants and their products human life would soon disappear from the earth.

We are reading and hearing something about conservation of [illegible] these days. An understanding of plant life is preparing the way for the acquirement of an intelligent preservation of our valued forms of nature.

In Europe one sees the various natural features painstakingly cared for and zealously protected. That is one of the first differences in customs which is noted when landing on foreign shores.

In nature study it is a source of satisfaction to know something of the processes of plant life and to be able to identify species. By [illegible] a [illegible] plant one [illegible] a [illegible] place or [illegible] and know how it came to be. [illegible] Hilborn.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Happenings That Affect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual. National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare.

At least one American industry has grown from childhood to maturity during the depression—commercial air transport. An interesting survey of this industry, which is assuming increasing economic significance, appears in a recent issue of the United States News.

At the present time, air passenger traffic in this country is about six times as large as it was in 1929, and the volume has doubled in the last two years. Where less than 465,000 passengers rode the airways in 1934 almost 742,000 left terra firma in 1935. Estimates say that about 900,000 people will board transports this year. In 1926, when passenger transport was inaugurated in a few scattered lines, only 5,782 people bought tickets.

Startling fact is that while there are established air systems in all modern countries, American airlines carry more passengers than are carried in all of the rest of the world combined, along with two-thirds of the world's total of air-borne mail and express.

As everyone knows, air transportation has grown cheaper through the years; early rates were virtually prohibitive. It has likewise grown more comfortable, due to developments in sound proofing, cabine [illegible] motor vibration, making planes more stable in wind currents [illegible] Speeds have been markedly [illegible] modern [illegible] average 180 miles an hour where fast lines in 1930 averaged little more than [illegible] And travel has been made safer. Last year there was but one passenger fatality for every [illegible] passenger miles flown.

According to the Department of [illegible] half the people [illegible] going to [illegible] and there are [illegible] to a position with [illegible] [illegible] stage [illegible] comparable to that offered by railroads and [illegible]

In spite of the industry's greatly increased volume of business all has not been rosy in the matter of making profits. Most air lines [illegible] can't pay expenses on passenger business. Thus the [illegible] cancellation of air mail contracts two years ago [illegible] hard. The contracts have been renewed, but in many cases the rates paid for mail carrying have been slashed.

Furthermore, the upkeep of airplanes is [illegible] expensive. Machines have a relatively short life, as they must be in absolutely perfect condition to receive the Department of Commerce's okay. And new developments are constantly adding to the [illegible] items in the operator's books. For instance, people marveled not so long ago at the appearance of planes carrying 10 or 15 people. Latest planned airliner will have four motors and accommodations for 40 passengers besides mail, express and a sizable crew.

As for the future of air transport, it is still in the speculative stage. General transoceanic passenger service is envisioned for the reasonably near future—the giant flying "clippers" traveling from California to the Philippines and China will soon take passengers. And there is much talk of stratosphere flying, which would vastly increase plane speeds—a ship capable of 200 at 5,000 feet will double that speed as it reaches rarified heights. But the toughest kind of technical problems are involved, and it will be years before the dream can be realized, according to even the most optimistic designers and air-theorists.

In the meantime, it seems certain that the industry will continue to progress in such matters as plane speeds, passengers carried, coverage of the country, etc. There are no signs that it will in any way supplant other media of transport, such as the railroads, trucks and buses, but it offers a very valuable supplementary service. And it is naturally becoming a bigger economic factor as it employs more workers and buys more materials.

It is reliably rumored that those who expected withering campaign blasts from the White House are going to be disappointed. President Roosevelt's strategy — which, of course, can be quickly changed should conditions warrant it — is said to call for non-combative, constructive talks and speeches, such as Mr. Roosevelt's report on his trip through the drought country, made over both big broadcasting chains on September 6.

In the Republican camp, a more aggressive stand will be taken—[illegible] Landon can point to his past record and discuss future policies in constructive terms and let it go at that, but a [illegible] must denounce. Colonel Knox will be principal "denouncer," as early speeches prove. But there will be no "dirty politics" unless all the signs fail.

That [illegible] of [illegible] campaigns, the Literary Digest poll, is on again. Keep your eye on it. If [illegible] the election is close, it will be interesting to see how near such a poll can come to anticipating the outcome and the victor's majority.

Some of the national capital's financial experts are wondering how it is that the federal budget will run "only" $2,096,996,300 out of balance this fiscal year instead of $2,596,996,300.

Two factors raised the question after the budget bureau issued its recent recapitulation. The first is relief expenditures. The $2,096,966,300 deficit includes only the $1,425,000,000 appropriation voted last session of Congress. Already, relief officials have served notice that the $1,425,000,000 will be almost gone when Congress reconvenes in January. It will therefore, be necessary to get more money to continue relief as at present. Relief officials hope $500,000,000 extra will be enough.

If they ask, and get, $500,000,000 the deficit for this year will be $2,596,966,300.

Second is the proposed reduction in the Treasury's "working balance." In the last couple of years, the Treasury has accumulated about $2,000,000,000 in its cash fund, just like an individual would build up that much in his checking account.

But now the plan is to reduce that $2,000,000,000 by half. That does not mean that $1,000,000,000 will be saved, but simply that it will be taken out of the "working balance" and used to pay running expenses. Therefore, by June 30, say the analytical, the government will have spent $3,596,996,300 more than it took in during the fiscal year.

* * *

Much is appearing in print these days about how various federal agencies are reducing their payrolls. For instance, about how WPA dropped 200 employes; how Rex Tugwell's Resettlement Administration is cutting 20%; about how the AAA expects to cut from 4,600 to 1,500 employes; about how the National Bituminous Coal Commission, charged with administering the invalidated Guffey Coal Act, has let off a hundred or so.

But in the background, the biggest single group of civil employes ever on the federal payroll is being quietly built up. At last accounts, the Social Security Board had 961 persons on its payroll, and beginning about November 15 it expects to begin a more rapid expansion toward its top of 10,000 to 12000.

Even if WPA dropped 200, the AAA 3 100, the RA 300 and the Coal Commission 100, the net increase by the first of the year would still be 6,300 to 8,300.

The hurricane season finds the WPA trying to close a door behind a departed horse. Everyone recalls the many lives lost at Matecumbe and Tavernier, Florida, last September when WPA veterans were caught by a storm.

The WPA has just announced allotment of $30,000 for construction of hurricane-proof shelters in the Florida Keys. Already, the WPA is building two other storm-proof buildings in that area—a 14-room school house at Fort Lauderdale and a 12-room school at Belle Glade.

A $33,000,000,000 Millstone

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

If a farmer or a business man finds himself deep in debt his first aim is to find some method of reducing it.

That goes for the housewife, too!

All recognize a heavy burden of debt as a millstone around the neck of any individual, or firm, or family that is attempting to keep its affairs on a successful basis.

Moreover, they all know the effective method of solving their problem. It is Economy.

But the politicians, during recent years, seem to think they have found a happier solution. Instead of trying a reasonable economy, they have been turning to a program of increased expenditures, increased extravagance, deeper plunges into the spreading pool of red ink.

This is indicated by the way they have been boosting the Public Debt. It probably explains why the Federal Debt alone has risen steadily from approximately $19,000,000,000 in 1932, to $27,000,000,000 in 1934, and to an all-time high of more than $33,000,000,000 for 1936.

It's an alluring method — to the politicians. But it's less attractive to the farmer and the business man and the housewife, who know that they must pay the debts which politicians create.

And it becomes still less attractive when they realize that public debt is actually an obscured method of adding to our taxes — with the bills marked for a later date — or of piling up a heritage of liens against the future earnings of our children.

But the mere realization of these facts on the part of the public isn't enough. If the farmer and the business man and the housewife want to stop the piling up of bills for them and their children to pay in added labor and added sacrifice and higher prices, they must make the politicians face the facts, too.

A $33,000,000,000 millstone is a heavy handicap for the workers and earners and taxpayers of America to carry along the hard road to recovery.

PHILIP F. SAYLES

The subject of this week's sketch was born in Adams, Mass., Oct. 16, 1896. He was valedictorian of his class at Adams High School and won four letters in school sports. He graduated from Williams College in 1917 and has since received the degree of Master of Arts from Columbia University. At Williams he was active in athletics, musical clubs and the choir.

He became a naval aviation pilot and after his discharge he held positions with the Wamsutta Cotton Mills, New Bedford, and Berkshire Cotton Manufacturing Co. at Adams. He served as Recreation Director at Turner's Falls, Mass., where he built an all year round playground and installed a physical education system in the schools. After that he carried on the same work in Owosso, Mich., and was connected with the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana and the Sinclair Refining Co of Michigan.

Returning east in 1927, he taught at Drury High School, No. Adams, and since 1929 has been principal of Adams High School. Mr. Sayles came here last month, becoming principal of Gould Academy on the opening of the school year, September 15.

In 1920 he married Miss Mary Lu Bond of North Adams. He is a member of the American Legion and is a Past Master of Berkshire Lodge A. F. & A. M. of Adams.

Metal roofing is being laid on the belfrey of the Congregational Church.

Mrs. Sidney Dyke and baby returned to their home at Westmont, N. J., last Friday after spending the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Berry.

Miss Harriett Rollins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rollins of Gorham, N. H., one time residents of Bethel, is enrolled as a student at the Chicago Physical Educational Training School, Chicago, Ill.

MAINES TOURIST BUSINESS SHOWS 20% INCREASE

Herbert L. Swett, president of the Maine Publicity Bureau and member of the Maine Development Commission, views Maine's $108,000,000 1936 tourist revenue as ample justification for a $250,000 advertising budget for the Development Commission. The increase in gasoline taxes this season is alone five times the sum expended for state advertising, he said. Commenting on a recent Associated Press dispatch regarding the summer tourist trade, Swett said:

"The Associated Press recently reported that the tourist business in this now closing season was the best since 1929, and that here in Maine it had increased twenty percent. News of this kind justifies the opinion held by myself and others that Maine has far from reached the top of its potential summer business. Figures given in the article place Maine's income from tourists at $108,000,000 as compared to $85,000,000 in 1935.

It is interesting to me that Maine's estimated increase of $23,000,000 was not due to any high powered promotion schemes. Texas is holding a big exposition. There was the Great Lakes exposition in the Middle West. Maine had nothing on such a grand scale. Nothing, that is, except her natural beauties, her pure air and sunshine, her incomparable summer resorts both inland and on the coast.

When I think of the tremendous sums necessary to stage such promotional enterprises as the Chicago Fair, the Texas and San Diego Expositions, and now the New York World's Fair planned for 1939, I cannot help but feel how fortunate we are here in Maine not to have to resort to that type of artificial stimulation of tourist trade.

Maine's advertising budget [illegible] $100,000, an increase of $50,000 over two years ago. This season's increase in tourist revenue justifies the insistent plea of the Maine Development Commission for an increased appropriation to advertise the state's attractions. The [illegible] extra $50,000 can be credited [illegible] of the extra $23,000,000 of out-of-state money distributed among our people—not money passing from one pocket to another within the state."

Cockeyed Tax Law

"This (The Surplus Tax law) is the most cockeyed piece of tax legislation ever imposed in a modern country and if I am elected I shall recommend the immediate repeal of this vicious method of taxation . . . Actually it has no relation to 'soaking the rich'. What it does is to protect the big fellow who still has a reserve, and tie a millstone around the neck of the little fellow."—Alf M. Landon at Buffalo, N. Y.

CHAPTER VIII

IN SPITE of Elisha's indignation toward Stanley Heath, and his resolve to go to the Homestead with the break of dawn, it was noon before he and Eleazer got under way.

In the first place, the two men disagreed as to the proper method of arresting the alleged criminal.

"You can't take him on no warrant, 'Lish," Eleazer objected, "'cause you ain't actually got proof he's guilty."

"Proof? Ain't I got a clear case? Ain't I roundin' him up with the loot on him?" blustered Elisha.

"P'raps—p'raps you didn't really see the jewels," Eleazer quavered. "Are you plumb certain you saw them things?"

"Certain!"

"Come, come! Don't go up in the air, 'Lish. I ain't doubtin' your word. I just want to make sure we don't take no missteps an' make jackasses of ourselves," Eleazer explained. "Have you got everythin'?"

"I—I—guess so," Elisha said weakly.

The stroll to Crocker's Cove was not a hilarious one. With each successive step Elisha's spirits dropped lower and lower.

At last they came within sight of the bay.

"Where'd you leave the boat?" Eleazer questioned.

"I pulled her up opposite the fish shanty."

"She ain't here."

"My soul an' body! What's to be done now?"

"I reckon we'll just have to give it all up," the sheriff responded with a sickly grin. "Call it off."

"An' let the thief escape? No sir-ee! We've got to go through with this thing now we've started if it takes a leg. We'll walk round by the shore."

In high dudgeon the two men plodded through the sand, its grit seeping into their shoes with every step.

It was not until they came within sight of the Homestead that the silence between them was broken.

"Wal here we are!" Eleazer announced more genially.

"Yes—here—here we are!" his comrade panted. "My soul an' body—what a tramp! I'm near dead! Wait a minute, Eleazer. Let's take 'count of stock an' decide how we're goin' to proceed. We've got to make a plan."

"But we've made a plan already. After you've knocked at the door an' gone in—"

"I knocked an' gone in?"

"Yes yes," Elisha repeated. "After that you'll sorter state the case to Marcia, 'splainin' why we've come an' everythin'—"

"An' what'll you be doin' meantime?" Eleazer inquired, wheeling sharply.

"Me? Why, I'll be waitin' outside, kinder loiterin' 'til it's time for me to go in—don't you see?"

"I don't. I think 'twould be better was you to go ahead an' pave the way for me. That's how it's done in plays. Some kinder unimportant person goes first an' afterward the hero comes in."

"So you consider yourself the hero of this show, do you?" commented Elisha sarcastically.

"Ain't I?"

"Wal, you don't 'pear to me to be. Who egged you on an' marched you here against me thought? If you ain't the most ungrateful cuss alive! I've a big half mind to go back home an' leave you to do your arrestin' alone."

"Don't do that, Eleazer, don't do that!" Elisha begged. "Don't go home an' leave me—now—at the last minute."

"Very well," Eleazer agreed magnificently. "Then I'll remain an' give you my moral support."

Elisha got up and, dragging one foot after another, moved toward the house.

"Now knock," commanded the dictator.

Tremulously Elisha tapped on the door.

No answer came.

"Knock, I tell you! That ain't knockin'. Give the door a good smart thump so's't folks'll hear it an' be made aware somethin' important's goin' on. I'll show you."

Eleazer gave the door a spirited bang.

"Law, Eleazer! A rap like that would wake the dead," Elisha protested. "I hear somebody. Stand by me, Eleazer. Where are you goin'? Come back here, can't you? You promised—"

"I didn't promise to go in first. You was to do that," Eleazer called from his vantage ground round the corner.

"But—but—" Elisha whimpered.

The door swung open and Marcia stood on the sill.

"Why, Elisha!" she exclaimed. "How you startled me. Come in. You're all dressed up, aren't you? Have you been to a funeral?"

"No. I—we—"

The sheriff cleared his throat.

"Me an' Eleazer—" he began.

"Eleazer? Did he come with you?"

Elisha nodded.

"Isn't he coming in?"

"Yes—yes. He's coming presently."

"Well sit down and tell me the news."

His dignity, his pomposity put to rout, Elisha, feeling very small indeed, backed into the nearest chair.

"You won't mind if I go on with my baking, will you?" Marcia said, bustling toward the stove. "I'm makin' dried apple turnovers. They'll be done in a second and you shall have one. I guess a nice hot apple turnover won't go amiss."

With deftness she whisked a triangle of flaky pastry onto a plate and extended it toward her guest.

He sat down with the plate in his lap.

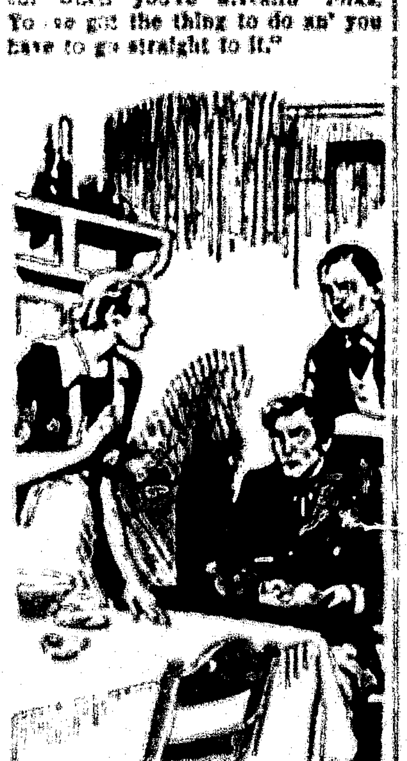
He had taken only an introductory mouthful, however, when the door parted a crack and Eleazer crept cautiously through the opening.

For a moment he stood transfixed, then he burst out in a torrent of reproach.

"'Lish Winslow, what on earth are you doin'? Here I've been waitin' outside in the wind, ketchin' my death of cold, an' you settin' here by the stove rockin' an' eatin' pie."

"I know, Eleazer, I know," Elisha stammered. "It may mebbe, seem queer to you. I just hadn't got around to the business in hand, that's all. I'm comin' to it in time. I've made a start. I was just leadin' up to it in a sorter tactful way."

"There ain't no way of bein' tactful when you're arrestin' folks. You've got the thing to do an' you have to go straight to it."



"Arresting Folks?" Marcia Repeated

"Arresting folks?" Marcia repeated, looking from one man to the other.

"Yes. Since 'Lish is so spineless at his job, I may's well tell you what we come for. Pretty kind of a sheriff he is."

"You better look out, Eleazer Crocker, how you insult an officer of the law," Elisha bawled angrily. "Say a word more an' I'll hail you into court."

"If you don't land me there faster'n you do Heath I shan't worry," jeered Eleazer.

"Heath? Mr. Heath?" Marcia repeated.

"Yes. We come over here this mornin' to place Mr. Stanley Heath under arrest," Eleazer announced.

"Of what are you accusing Mr. Heath?" Marcia demanded.

"Of the Long Island robbery," Eleazer answered.

"You mean to say you think him a thief?"

"We know he's one—leastways Elisha does."

"I—yes! I'm tol'able sure. I have evidence," Elisha replied. "At least I figger I have."

"Shucks, 'Lish!" Eleazer cried. "Where's your backbone? You figger you have! Don't you know it? Ain't you beheld the loot with your own eyes?"

Elisha nodded.

"Then why on earth don't you stand up in your boots an' say so?"

The door opened and Sylvia entered, then stopped, arrested on the threshold by the sound of angry voices.

Marcia, with whitened lips but with face grave and determined, remained with her back to the stairway door, her eyes never leaving Elisha Winslow's. There was something in her face Sylvia had never seen there—a light of battle; a fierceness as of a mother fighting for her child; a puzzling quality to which no name could be given.

Suddenly, as the girl studied her, recognition of this new characteristic flashed upon her understanding. It was love!

Anger, perhaps terror, had forced Marcia into betraying a secret no other power could have dragged from her.

"What proof have you?" Marcia demanded.

Elisha shifted from one foot to the other.

"I've seen the jewels," he whispered. "They're here—in this room, under that brick. I've seen 'em."

With finger pointing dramatically toward the hearth, Elisha strode forward.

Sylvia, however, sprang before him, standing 'twixt him and his goal.

"What a ridiculous story, Mr. Winslow!" she cried. "What a fantastic yarn! Do you imagine for one moment there could be anything hidden under those bricks and Marcia and I not know it? Why, one or the other of us has been in this room every instant since Mr. Heath arrived. When could he get the chance to hide anything? There is nothing here, Mr. Winslow, truly there is nothing. I swear it."

"Nevertheless, let him look, Sylvia. Let them both look."

"Please—please, Marcia—I!"

Sylvia was upon her knees now on the hearth, and the men, hesitating to remove her by force, halted awkwardly.

Marcia regarded her first with startled incredulity—then with coldness.

So Sylvia loved Heath, too!

She was fighting for him—fighting with all her feeble strength.

A pang wrenched the older woman's heart.

What if Heath had played a double game—made love to Sylvia as he had made love to her? If so—if the man were a mountebank the sooner they both found it out—the sooner the world knew it, the better.

If, on the other hand, he was innocent, he should have his chance.

"Get up, Sylvia," she said. "The sheriff must search. He must do his duty. We have no right to prevent it."

Her face was pale, her lips tightly set.

The brick was lifted out.

A smothered cry escaped Sylvia and was echoed.

"Why—land alive—there's nothin' here!" gasped the sheriff.

"I told you there was nothing!" Sylvia taunted, beginning to laugh hysterically.

"Wal 'Lish, all I can say is you must either 'a' been wool gatherin' or dreamin' when you conceived this yarn," Eleazer jeered.

"I warn't," hissed Elisha, stung to the quick. "I warn't dreamin'. Them jewels was there. I saw 'em with my own eyes. I swear to heaven I did." He confronted Sylvia. "They was there, young lady, warn't they? You know they was. That's why you was so scairt for me to look. You've seen 'em. Deny it if you dare."

"Of course I deny it."

"Humph! But Marcia won't. You can lie if you want to save the skin of that good-for-nothin' critter upstairs—though what purpose is served by your doin' it I can't see. But Marcia won't. If she says them jewels warn't here I'll believe it. Come now, Marcia. Was there ever diamonds an' things under this brick or warn't there?"

"Yes."

"You saw 'em?"

As if the admission was dragged from her, Marcia formed, but did not utter, the word:

"Yes."

"There! Then I ain't gone daffy! What I said was true," Elisha acclaimed, rising in triumph and snapping his finger at Eleazer.

"The jewels were Mr. Heath's. He hid them for safe keeping.

"A likely story! He stole 'em—that's what he did."

"Prove it," challenged Marcia, with sudden spirit, a spurt of crimson burning on either cheek.

"Prove it?" Elisha was taken aback. "Wal, I can't at the moment do that. I can't prove it. But even if I can't, I can make out a good enough case against him to arrest him on suspicion. That's what I mean to do—that's what I come for an' what I'll do 'fore I leave this house."

"Mr. Heath is sick."

"I guess he ain't so sick but what I can go up an' cross-examine him."

"I ask you not to go. I forbid it. Drop this matter for a day or two, Elisha. Mr. Heath shall not leave the house. I promise you that. Leave him here in peace until he is well again. When he is able to—to—go with you I will telephone. You can trust me. When have I ever been false to my word?"

"I don't see why the mischief you're so crazy to stand 'twixt this Heath chap an' justice, Marcia. The feller's a scoundrel. That's what he is—an out an' out scoundrel. Not only is he a thief but he's a married man who's plottin' behind your back to betray you—boastin' openly in telegrams he is."

"What do you mean?"

"I wouldn't like to tell you. In fact I couldn't. 'Twould be repeatin' what was told me in confidence," hedged Elisha, frightened by the expression on the woman's face.

"I have a right to know about the telegrams you mention. Will you tell me or shall I call up the Sawyer Falls operator?"

"Oh, for heaven's sake don't do that," Elisha pleaded. "Artie Nickerson would be ragin' mad did he find out I told you. If you must know what the message was, I can repeat it near 'nough, I reckon. It ran somethin' like this:

"'Safe on Cape with my lady. Shall return with her later.'"

"And that was all?" inquired Marcia calmly.

"All! Ain't that enough?" Elisha demanded.

As she vouchsafed no reply, he presently continued:

"I don't want you should think I told you this, Marcia, with any unfriendly motive. It's only that those of us who've seen you marry one worthless villain don't want you should marry another. You know that well's I."

The woman raised her hand to check him.

"I'm aware 'tain't pleasant to hear me say so out loud, but it's God's truth."

"Marcia!" Sylvia burst out. "Marcia!"

"Hush, dear. We'll talk of this later. Elisha, I think I must ask you and Eleazer to go now."

"You ain't goin' to tell me where the jewels are?"

"I don't know where they are."

"Nor nothin' 'bout—'bout the telegram?"

"Nothing except to thank you for your kind intentions and say you quoted it correctly. I sent it for Mr. Heath myself. 'My Lady,' as you have apparently forgotten, is the name of Mr. Heath's boat."

"My lady! So 'tis," faltered Elisha. "I'm awful sorry, Marcia—I ask your pardon."

"It's all right. Just leave, please."

The door banged behind comfited officials.

Percentage Changes

Only marginal percentage changes were recorded during the fifth week tabulations, as compared to fourth week returns. The Oklahoma and North Dakota votes for Roosevelt, plus a slightly heavier Democratic vote from several states, resulted in the following percentage gain for him.

	Last Week	This Week
Landon	63.6%	62.1%
Roosevelt	36.4	37.9

As between Landon, Roosevelt and Lemke:

	Last Week	This Week
Landon	60.6%	59.3%
Roosevelt	34.6	36.1
Lemke	4.8	4.7

The keen interest being shown in this poll was reflected in national headquarters here by a Fifth week rush of Roosevelt ballots, which if continued, will no doubt iron out some of the wide majorities piled up in Landon "hot spots" states where early voting was heavy on the G. O. P. side.

Hope Will Direct G.O.P. Farm Group

Agricultural Division to Work With Township Committees.

Chicago.—Practical farmers will take an active part in directing the Republican campaign in rural areas, Congressman Clifford D. Hope of Garden City, Kas., announced in assuming the directorship of the Farm Division of the Republican National Committee

In each agricultural state, an advisory council is to be set up. This council is to be composed of practical "dirt" farmers who will supply the basic suggestions for the campaign

Three assistant directors have been appointed to aid Congressman Hope. They are Don L. Berry of Indianola, Iowa, publisher of the Indianola Record, E. H. Taylor of Yates Center, Kansas, for 12 years assistant editor of The Country Gentleman, and Congressman Francis D. Culkin of Oswego, New York, an authority on dairying and active in legislation affecting dairy farmers

"The Republican farm campaign is going to have its roots out in the farm districts" said Congressman Hope. "The farmers themselves will tell us what they want and how they feel about things."

"YOU AIN'T SEEN NUTHIN' YET"

Short Story by New England Council Stresses Beauties of Autumn Travel—Fall and Winter Sports

The old Yankee lobster fisherman rubbed his grizzled chin and surveyed with genial eyes the young couple before him. "No," he repeated, "you ain't seen nuthin' yet. That's the trouble with you folks."

The girl smiled. "Trouble?"

"Sure." The old man searched his pockets for his corncob, his gaze wandering off across the bay to a distant line of fir-capped islands. He scratched his head thoughtfully.

"Ordinarily," he said finally, "I don't go handin' out advice that ain't called for. But you folks come way up here to New England to have a good time."

"And we've certainly had it," commented the young man.

The fisherman nodded. "You been up through the mountains, you drove along the coast, you been swimmin' here in God A'mighty's ocean, you been playin' golf, battin' tennis balls around a court, ridin' them fancy hosses they got up at the hotel, breathin' this fine air, and a-romancin' around. Now you're goin' home—when all you've seen and done here is only the —wha'do them people down at the summer playhouse call it?—the prologue. Why, New England in autumn"—he was warming to his subject—"there ain't nuthin' like it nowhere!" He pointed his pipe-stem toward the undulating line of hills. "What's the color o' them hills?"

"Green."

"Sure they're green. But two or three weeks from now they're goin' to be red an' orange, yolla, brown, green, blue—all decked out like a peacock on a holiday. Yes sir! Them colors is worth anybody's time! An' corn-fields full o' punkins, orchards red with apples, cider right out o' the press, an' a harvest moon hung up there like a big copper dipper!

"Why New England ain't ripe till after Labor Day!"

Increasingly New England's recreational visitors are staying on after Labor Day, and more and more vacationists are planning their New England tours for the cool brilliant days of September and October. Autumn is our most glorious season, filled with the color and gaiety of county fairs, and harvest festivals, and pleasant warmth of open fires at quiet country inns. The crowds are gone, and life is less tense than during the midsummer rush—driving is easier, varied accommodations are available and rates after Labor Day are attractive.

The sports of summer still remain for autumn days, clear of fogs and haze, are bright and sunny. United States Weather Bureau records for the past fifty years show that there are more sunny days in New England in September and October than in any other month of the year. It's warm enough for salt and fresh water swimming, yet ideal for golf, tennis riding, gunning, and mountain tramping. Nights are unfailingly cool, bringing deep restful sleep

And later, there are the snow sports this winter. New England is the winter playground of the eastern seaboard with the finest network of ski trails in America. Certainly New England's attractive features do not stop with summertime.
